About the Seminar :

The vision of the 12th Financial Year Plan for Indian higher education is to achieve further access to higher education through a mission mode national programme of creating new universities and increasing the intake capacity of the existing universities and colleges. Access will be coupled with equity and inclusion by bridging regional imbalances and disparities across disciplines and shall address spatial, economic, social and technological needs of the country. The initiatives will be capped with enhancing inputs for quality and excellence in all spheres of higher education. Student's intake, faculty enrichment, curricular and evaluation reforms, revamping governance structures, laying greater emphasis on research and innovation by creating an efficient regulatory framework.

Concurrent with the national attention towards expansion in higher education and providing for equity, it is also necessary to ensure that quality and excellence are sustained and upgraded in all the institutions of higher education to match up to international levels. In identifying the goals and objectives of the 12th Financial in higher education, there have been certain constraints in opportunities which need to be identified so that strategies could be evolved not only for addressing them but also to leverage the opportunities. Some of the constraints have a bearing on the expectations of the education sector from other Ministries and the state, as also the private sector.

This context is pressing for the a fresh thinking on the future university as a place for the generation and transmission of knowledge and values, where such re-thinking needs to go beyond issues of design, organization and resources of the future university, and take on foundational questions like, What is knowledge, why do we need it, how do we acquire it and what are the limits to what we know. In responding to its unique challenges, India can shape global response to the much talked about "Crisis of higher education".

Further, in the view of the new regulations laid by the NCTE towards restructuring teacher education, it has been a challenging task to qualitatively stretch the related activities for a better teacher education. The dearth of quality teachers in school sectors and the need for trained teachers at +2 stage and the incorporation of different pedagogies for the new disciplines increasing day by day has made the teacher educators in particular and academicians in general to sit a discuss seriously and arrive at a consensus to establish the need of the new initiatives and the measures to be taken up for their successful implementation. With these tasks in mind this seminar will provide a platform to come out successfully with the solutions and alternatives.
